What do you mean by "sexual preference"?

What are some examples of institutional oppression - the ways in which oppression has been codified in our institutions of custom, practice and law, and what are some examples of how institutional oppression directly contributes to violence against women? Are there specific ways that oppression contributes to VAW?

The glass ceiling

true.
Can you elaborate, Joyce?
that's so gay, that's so retarded, that's lame....all common amongst teens.
this type of oppression create barriers for LGBT folks to access services
I hear a lot on college campuses - "that's so ghetto" it goes to the same point you just mentioned of "that's so gay" and the students don't realize that what they are saying is truly racist such a norm hey?
so many people... college students included don't feel that language has any power we treat all clients with respect regardless of gender or sexual orientation and work to meet their needs internal coalition, staff-wide anti-racism group promote male participation in advocacy efforts for rape care centers support communities to add other oppressions to their violence prevention work We challenge gender messages in our 16 week healthy relationships groups for middle school students integrating social justice focus in mission, talking about dynamics of power, privilege and oppression at all levels, including but not limited to volunteer training, volunteer meetings, among staff Promote universal screening looking at prevention campaigns and education in schools: incorporating anti-oppression into design of all activities is an example-- would love more creative tools to do this

The current question to the guests is: what are some specific examples of exciting prevention work that you have seen or would like to see that incorporates anti-oppression work, particularly at the institutional level?

another language example of norms is "the wife beater" tank top shirt, it's used without a thought to implication work we do with police departments sbrcc is part of local immigrant rights coalition--working in coalition with groups working on different forms of oppression is key

We developed a brochure on intersections of oppression, hate crimes and SA. This brochure supports our violence prevention programs.

Paula, what program are you with?

Is that brochure something that you are willing to share?

I feel education is the key and begin in kindergarden

North Coast Rape Crisis Team, Humboldt/Del Norte, California

we also do prevention education in schools

we establish anti-violence peer groups in high schools - educate them to spread word among student body, involve them in anti-violence campaigns

we're trying to start a class for parents of kindargarten kids - on gender socializatoin and modeling in regards to preventing sexual violence don't do primary prevention without multi-racual/cultural leadership--put resources into developing, sustaining that network as a preliminary to primary prevention.

What we say is based on what we think,What we think is based n what we believe, What we believe determines how we act...Language is Powerful.

incorporate race, class, gender, etc. analysis into education programming and all training programs yes! we wok with parents too!

Paula is that a brochure you would be willing to share?

amen Michelle

Shift personal and organizational thinking and acting from inserting an anti-oppression comoponent in VAW work to seeing Violence Against Women Children and Men as part of the anti-oppression movement.

Yes, I'd be willing to share the brochure with anyone interested.

we also often make a contingency that the parent needs to be in counseling if the child is receiving counseling at our agency

Karolina, would you be willing to share your curriculum for parents?

OK, David. I can send it to you in a pdf if you'd like.

Paula, I also would be interested in the brochure.

Our STAND & SERVE students address oppression year round and link it as a root factor to sexual violence. We also spend the month of january which is unity month doing quite a bit of school family and community activities aimed at addressing and ending oppression. Is that what you are looking for??? We need to start with young people as well.

Me too!

step - systematic training for effective parenting, we also use self-designed presentations, we work from the Safe from the Start model

i'm interested as well Paula (krodriguez@familyserviceleague.org)

and me

We facilitate a Get Real About Violence curriculum in elementary schools and an It's Not Ok curriculum in high schools. The curriculum addresses ani-bullying, anger management, etc.
we would love to see the brochure and also the parents mcurric Paula I am interested. Jennifermariefrazier@yahoo.com PCAR too, David Lee - can you post this to PreventConnect?
I'd love to see the brochure, too!
David could you send these resources if provided to all on the call?
I'm going to send the brochure to David Lee and he'll post it.
I'm very interested in the Get Real About Violence curriculum. Would you share?
can we find those curriculums on line?
yes we would be happy to share
I'd like to see the “Get Real” Curriculum too
Please share; these are great resources!
The North Coast brochure referred to earliers will be posted on www.PreventConnect.org
The handout will be posted at www.PreventConnect.org courtesy of Paula Arrowsmith-Jones thanks david Thank you.
thank you
Thanks!
thanks to Paula for sharing --
I love the cultural audit idea and would appreciate materials on how to do that!!
Need to encourage all sv and dv programs to work collaboratively with other social change organizations in our communities who are committed to anti-oppression lenses of change, not work in isolation
Kristina -Kim, did you get my answer?
It would be really valuable to have models of the Women of Color and white women's dismantling racism groups for organizations that may want to start something similar Great Yolanda! VSDVAA WOC Caucus addressed IO at a retreat. Language is important among us.
VSDVAA is working on a Change Team to address racism and IO
Will this text chat be available to preview afterwards? I'm finding it hard to follow this conversation and the ongoing one with the presenters.
One thing I struggle with is incorporating the bigger picture of oppression when we have a very short time with youth to teach skills and knowledge regarding violent and healthy relationships.
That's called racism in the english language, when we are referring to terminology that deems dark things as being evil or bad thinking first before reacting www.leavencenter.org offers anti-racism/doing our own work trainings for white allies Working with Men on a personal level and Institutional level correction to the web address leaven.org Laura; yes it will be available tomorrow try to be more open to working with men in our field Recruit creatively within communities of color, trans people, etc. Be willing to WAIT to fill a position to make this happen.
We must also look at Class it can be extremely damaging in the long term to address the issues of violent and healthy relationships without addressing oppression.

Focus on and reward men who behave in a positive HUMANE way so that they impact the perception of norm

Create a Change Team of White and people of color to educate and reeducate on these issues. Look at how racism manifests in the org and how to address it with concrete action steps.

Would the speaker be willing to share the "audit"?

Our office displays decor that is welcoming to people of various backgrounds, including the LGBT community - we also make sure to integrate oppression in our training of staff and volunteers

The text chat will be posted on www.PreventConnect.org in a few days

Offer second language stipends - of course funding cuts makes this difficult but it's an important commitment.

Joyce, can you elaborate?

then the issue becomes why are there such funding cuts for second language stipends

Our STAND & SERVE students address oppression year round as a root factor of sexual violence. We also work with schools, families and communities during the month of January which is Unity Month. We cultivate understanding and address oppression as a means to ending sexual violence. We need to start with young people and together work with schools, the legislature and much more!

and what can we do to change that in some way

I will look through the files and get the information. I can also contact the person who performed the audit for the agency and then forward it to you.

what is the name of this program in San Fransico that Lisa is speaking about?

We prevent by working with men and work with women in risk reduction. Women can not prevent IPV or SA Build stronger coalitions with those working on oppression issues such as houselessness. We're attempting to do this with a local group called the "People's Project."

??How can we be supported to challenge oppression and practices of repressions that are brought to bear upon workers of color who are consistent in bringing questions of organizational oppression to the table who are Silenced by economic threat.

San Francisco Women Against Rape, I think

Lisa referred to a program from San Francisco Women Against Rape

I agree so much with the discussion about degrees and hiring!

WE created a end DV make a change poster that includes strategies to create change, one being challenge stereotypes

How can we use the Spectrum in our anti-oppression work to prevent VAW? [in particular at the levels of changing organizational practices and influencing policy and legislation]

RAISE YOUR HAND IF YOU WANT TO COMMENT THROUGH THE PHONE LINE

challenging hiring practices (policies) about educational background/degrees

I'm being called away to something urgent so I won't be able to stay on for the end. If there's a way for me to do an eval later, let me know.

we need to make sure that our legislators know that we are out there working on ending the violence!

We work directly with legislators to address oppression as a means to ending sexual violence. I hope to do a workshop at our state conference in Arizona with a legislator to promote primary prevention and addressing oppression as means to ending sv.....

We need universal health care (that includes mental and substance abuse treatment and we need child support laws that institute equal support orders immediately upon separation that acknowledge the nonmonetary contributions of the custodial parent working together as a team to come up with a safety plan.

In terms of preventing vaw, only perpetrators (generally male) can do this. Often though, men don't have enough empathy or understanding for what women's lives are like to confront sexism. Using Racism or class, or homophobia, etc is a way for them to connect their oppression in their lives, to that which women experience.

As mainstream DV and SA providers, we should continue to be educated ourselves/ incorporate education on other kinds of oppression into our own institutional development.

Making sure I promote women of color who work in my organization.

We will put that on www.PreventConnect.org as well

And we have our student work with legislators year round. Mainly education stuff right now. they need it. ok, im done :)

I've found that establishing policy doesn't guarantee enactment/enforcement. Rather makes the institution look good, but policy, enactment, implementation is unfunded so only a paper cover.

I'm trying to work with HR to re-think where we are advertising our job openings; instead of sitting around wondering why bilingual candidates aren't responding.

Alterantives to Family Violence partners with another nonprofit that provides Spanish language classes for our monolingual English speaking staff. We pay $10. per 6 week session for each of our staff who wish to take the classes. We also pay a language differential for any staff that speak read or write another language. language differential for those who speak, read

Participate in coalitions focused on other kinds of oppressions- migrant workers, anti-trafficking, etc. Support their work.

be inclusive...don't assume LBT folks are not accessing your services

Prevent violence against all as a model: end war, torture tolerance and medias disrespect toward others

Doing trainings and presentations for other agencies and organizations including law enforcement...

If you want to join the conversation on phone please raise your hand

Build creative collabs with small grassroots orgs...make sure they are in the loop. Don't exclude them. They get swallowed up by the big orgs and are sought after as a vital voice to empower communities.

Craft affiliation agreements that share resources, not just make referrals.

yes terra, this is what we do and we get a great response and lots of support for what we do from those agencies

When states consider opening up to casino gambling or other resorts, they could require through regulations that the resorts do not include access to porn on TV in the rooms, and participate in trade organization codes of conduct to prevent prostitution and trafficking in ways that do not harm those who are prostituted.

what is RPE funding?

Rape Prevention Education

what org do you work with Karolina?

Oops big orgs tend not to seek the voice of the small grassroots groups.

Rape Prevention education

lobby local representatives to fully fund VAWA... so much more could be done if it was fully funded south suburban family shelter out of illinois

Please raise your 'hand' if you would like to speak via phone.

great thanks.

Primary prevention at least means ongoing community organizing, resistance, push...and efforts to sustain and care for community leaders/activists. More important, almost, than completed policy work (which will never be completed).

translation !!!! oh yes very important translation is great, but what happens after someone reads translated materials, is there supports within the org to support that outreach/education

imp. but not enough by itself
Make sure policy language -- talking points -- are understood by the various communities of color.

translating brochures is not enough when trying to do outreach into these communities. the dialects are different depending on where you are and the violence may look different as well agencies can't claim to provide bilingual services if they only have info translated into another language and only have one staff person who speaks another language

Great point JoAnn!

i'm not unmuted

tell me again what the cultural component training is?

why is that? a small agency w/only a few bilingual employees...

i guess the number of bilingual employees should really be determined by the need in the community

I think this work is particularly difficult. We women have to deal with our own internalized oppression (sexism) and often don't begin there.

yes we can speak to that we continually see orgs accessing communities of color in order to insure access to increased funding yet not having any of the community of color represented at the administrative level or having poc who are deeply related and connected to community visible in the administrative lever bilingual doesn't always equal bicultural....and it increases burn out if only one or two staff people are the main services also, what does it mean to advertise being 'bilingual' org that is dependent on a few staff members, what happens when there is turn over?

how are these things prioritized in the institution and if outreach is successful, then what? is there funding to hire more staff to provide those services?

Yes, thank you. We white women have lots of work to do! And, it is on going. It never ends.

Rebecca, can you name what you are referring to as women's IO (sexism)?

The text chat will be posted on www.PreventConnect.org we're rural...very much so...and always advertise for bilingual advocates....getting applicants w/qualifications is extremely difficult - hard work/low pay!

Are the Women of Color & white women's groups within the agencies facilitated by an outside person, or is all the work internal?

I just look for the powerpoint slides on the website and could not find????

i hear you aprill. we struggle with the question of how to attract more diverse applicants and where/how to do this i would think both sometimes outside person and staff lead that is tricky b/c it can easily play into the oppression "white" women of color experience from communities of color

How do you get managers within the organization to stop "out-blacking" each other? There seems to be a competition regarding who is authentically black. How can an institution that prides itself on its diversity address the cultural "stuff" that they need to serve clients from working to the detriment of themselves?

where are you placing your ads? If you place them in your area only you will only attract that particular group of individuals. the low pay hard work is true everywhere. I find it difficult that is a deterrent to women of color, especially since statistically speaking a large number of women of color make less than white women what is authentic and according to who?

conversations around not having 'oppression olympics' and reminding each other that we need to work together and not against each other from within Yolanda, your powerful and sensitive leadership has been the energy behind making those cultural changes. When WOC are not in management positions...there is not much focus on creating anti-racist orgs so that it is the first principle by which the work is done.

Women of color leadership with white women supporting the women of color issues is vital to be true allies...in cautious approaches to the Native culture as a non Native woman and historical trauma issues I have been assured by Native women that acknowledging the dominant culture misconceptions and projected identities fosters safety and sisterhood

Please send in resources you have found helpful.
