The National Intimate Partner and Sexual Violence Survey (NISVS)

On average, 24 people per minute are victims of rape, physical violence, or stalking by an intimate partner in the United States, based on a survey conducted in 2010. Over the course of a year, that equals more than 12 million women and men. These numbers only tell part of the story—more than 1 million women are raped in a year and over 8 million women and men are victims of stalking in a year. These findings emphasize that sexual violence, stalking, and intimate partner violence are important and widespread public health problems in the United States.

KEY FINDINGS FROM 2010

 A PROJECT OF GALILEA

 Widespread in the US

In the year preceding the survey:

- More than 12 million women and men reported being a victim of rape, physical violence, or stalking by an intimate partner
- About 1.3 million women reported being raped
- Over 6 million women and men were a victim of stalking

Summary

- ❑ Sexual violence, stalking, and intimate partner violence affect millions each year
- ❑ Women are disproportionately impacted
- ❑ The majority of this violence is first experienced early in life
- ❑ There are immediate impacts and lifetime health consequences

Implications for Prevention

Los Angeles Times

Added Dr. Howard Spivak, director of the Division of Violence Prevention in CDC's Injury Center, "In addition to intervening and providing services, prevention efforts need to start earlier in life, with the ultimate goal of preventing all of these types of violence before they start."
